Notes:

Explore ashore via the Island Explorer bus system. Hike the many trails available in Acadia National Park. Enjoy some of the darkest skies on the east coast (according to National Geographic) for great star watching. Use Bar Harbor as a base for day sails or overnight trips to remote areas of Frenchman Bay. See Scott Burns' cruising guide for some suggested side trips. Go on your own or in groups but remember to keep the Fleet Captain posted on your plans so we don't launch a search party!

We may be able to arrange with Scott Burns' brother, a local lobsterman, to have an island lobster bake.

The Bar Harbor Regency Hotel Marina is located north and west of Bar Island about 1 mi. north of town on Rte. 3, beyond the Cat Ferry dock. It is somewhat more protected from easterly and southeasterly winds and is recommended by Scott Burns. Capacity is limited. They are expecting a mega-yacht to tie up much of their dock space. If you are planning an extended stay in Bar Harbor and are blocked out, contact the Fleet Captain or the Commodore. We'll try to arrange for preference to those of us planning longer stays.

The large anchorage north of Bar Island has virtually unlimited space. It is more protected from southerly winds and offers some protection from a southeast sea. From the anchorage you can dinghy across the bar into the town dock except for 2 hours, an hour before and after low tide. The dinghy dock does get very crowded!

South of Bar Island, Bar Harbor is exposed to the southeast and can be quite uncomfortable on a mooring or at anchor. Contact Charlie Phippen, the harbormaster, to arrange for a mooring or space on a float. The facilities at the Harborside Hotel and Marina, west of the municipal pier, are not particularly hospitable to sailors. They cater more to power boats. The water is shallow. There is no shore power. It's noisy and if there happens to be a southeast sea running you will be in for a rough, uncomfortable night.
